ARCHITECT

To whom it may concern,

About 14 years ago, I was invited to lunch by Francois Asselin who told me about his company and what they might provide for a European style house we designed. Soon thereafter I ordered Asselin windows and doors for the house I was building for my wife and me in Atlanta. Later, when the crates arrived from France, my contractor phoned to say that he found "peanut butter and a bottle of wine inside." That night, serving the pate de fois gras and sauternes, we toasted Asselin and their beautifully crafted windows and doors. In the subsequent years, the fenestration in our house has invariably been the subject of much interest and praise followed by "Where can I get them?" For the discerning client wanting a European style house, I always encourage using real French doors and windows when possible. As a result I have been pleased to use Asselin products in numerous houses I have designed over the past dozen years

With best wishes,
